EDITORIAL COMMENT

A good many thousands of words have been written in the last decade about what motivates Americans to philanthropy. No doubt endless hours of research and many thousands of survey questions have gone into the hopper to feed this "basic research" project so that the rapidly growing multitude of professional fund raisers in the country today can determine how best to approach you and me for our regular contributions to the many charities that so richly deserve our undying support.

Years ago it seems that the only "professional" fund raiser was the local preacher. And he apparently performed most of the practice of this "profession" along with his others, namely from his pulpit on Sunday mornings. There was a good deal of wheedling and cajoling and coaxing and Bible quoting, and even some careful threatening done. But no matter if we, or our parents, or grandparents, liked it or not, we are compelled to admit that the techniques applied met with a fair degree of success.

Now, however, as befits our middle of the twentieth century American style, the principles of philanthropy have been smoothly streamlined and professionalized. We still know we're being "touched", but again, we are again compelled to admit that the techniques applied are also quite successful. No one in this country needs to look far to find a giant edifice constructed and financed by private philanthropy and dedicated to the welfare of mankind in one way or another; United Fund appeals constantly go over the top; patron memberships to worthy causes are over-subscribed; scholarships for needy students are readily available; and scientific, medical, and social research, financed by private gifts, is underway everywhere.

The techniques of separating a donor from his dollar have indeed changed. But the donor's motives apparently remain unchanged.

We are told that many people give for purely selfish reasons, for prestige or social status, or because they are shamed into giving. All of these motives exist today, and none are new. Others give because of a genuine feeling of an obligation, to mankind in general or to a specific cause serving man, a sincere personal pride in programs and institutions to which they feel closest.

I confess to the usual amount of idealism, and therefore prefer the latter motives. Judging from responses from Alumni, you do, too.

Alumni may feel a three-fold obligation to their Alma Mater. The first would be a simple mathematical one. Tuition charges, at Rollins as at all colleges and universities, have always been substantially below the actual cost of providing an education. Thus, all colleges have sought other sources of income to balance their budgets. In short, someone else paid at least part of the cost of the education we all received, and we may well feel a responsibility for this "debt."

Rollins has given something special to most of her students. Besides serving up a solid educational program, which some students devour, while others nibble, there were meaningful and lasting friendships with faculty members and students, there were new insights into old problems, and a little wisdom to meet all problems and opportunities not yet experienced. It requires only a little reflection, too, to call up experiences which motivate, if not obligate, Alumni to want these opportunities available for others. For there are 950 young men and women on the campus today who find the same things in Rollins you found, and whose potential is as great.

Finally, Rollins is a private college. And while tax supported institutions, from kindergarten through the Ph.D., are a vital part of the American tradition, the private schools fill a special need and play a vital part in that same tradition. The private colleges today educate about 40% of our youth, and this alone results in a savings of uncounted millions of dollars to hard-pressed taxpayers. But more important, the private college creates an environment free from any political pressures, free to select faculty and students for the best instructional balance and atmosphere, free to grow large or stay small, free to be research centers, or teaching centers, or both, free to underscore the importance of that same kind of freedom in every facet of American life. I would submit that this, too, is not only an opportunity, it is an obligation.

There should be a motive there for everyone. But, if not, try pride. Rollins may never beat Alabama in football, but she can beat Ohio State in baseball, Wisconsin in golf, Miami in soccer, Notre Dame, Duke, Penn, in tennis, and Purdue and LaSalle in crew, and she has done so within the past year. Or her faculty can win grants for special math schools for outstanding high schoolers, her debate team can win a coveted seat representing United Nations members in sessions in New York, 60% of her science graduates can and do go on to graduate and professional schools, her professors can win wide academic recognition while also teaching classes and counseling students, and her students can handle regular class work, while doing independent study and participating in community service projects.

And there are many exciting things in Rollins future. With construction soon to begin on the Crummer School of Finance and Business Administration, and progress being made on the fieldhouse and proposed science center, no one would want to miss being a part of Rollins in the years to come. Regardless of your motives, we invite you to be an active participant.

ABOUT THE COVER

The cover photo ties in with our special feature story, Earning the Masters, and while there is no shortage of text books in Physics and Teaching, Dr. Welsh who heads the MBA program had huge shelves full of books placed in such a manner as to prove irresistible to our photographer.

John Tiedtke, Vice President and Dean of the Graduate Programs.

William Edwards, director of the Master of Arts in Teaching program.

John Ross, director of the graduate program in Physics.

Charles Welsch, director of the Master of Business Administration program.

EARNING THE MASTER'S

Rollins College is not unlike most colleges and universities in the land. Few people in their own communities have a full understanding of their operations. On the one hand, private citizens will mutter about the general nuisance of having an unduly large number of young people in their city or village. Exaggerated reports of mischief-making abound, especially when the presence of fraternities and sororities make it easy to place the blame for every undesirable event.

On the other hand, the more knowledgeable and less prejudiced business man can quote the enrollment, multiply it by the tuition fees, and come up with a figure, usually quite sizeable, about how much money the college brings into town, even though it does not pay property taxes on its land and buildings.

It would not be uncommon then to find many people in the Central Florida area, and many Alumni, and even students, who are not aware that Rollins has been conferring masters' degrees for a number of years.

The three masters' programs, Business Administration (MBA), Teaching (MAT), and Physics (MS), are all a part of the Rollins Institute for General Studies headed, along with his many other duties, by

Vice-President John Tiedtke. Like the School for General Studies which offers only undergraduate work, a good deal of it without college credit, the graduate programs also draw students primarily from the surrounding area. Both programs meet many of their classes at night, and both have grown rapidly. But the similarities end there. The highest degree offered in the School for General Studies is the bachelor's degree, while a basic requirement for admission to the three graduate programs is a bachelor's degree from an accredited college or university.

All three of the masters' programs were stated as a result of mounting, albeit informal, requests from interested individuals, educators and business men in the community in the late 1950's, and the demand was most certainly not over-estimated. The MBA program was the first to begin, in the fall of 1957, but the MAT program, initiated four years later, soon caught up in enrollment, and both programs have now levelled off with an enrollment of approximately 300. The Physics program, by nature a more specialized field, yet with a sizeable professional following in the sophisticated industries of Central Florida, offered its first graduate course in 1959, and currently has an enrollment of 60 students.

A REPORT ON ROLLINS' THREE GRADUATE PROGRAMS

Thus by 1961 President McKean's stated objective to further broaden the scope of Rollins' services to the community, had resulted in three sound, flourishing graduate programs, the nature of which could not have been more appropriate to the needs of the area. And all this while, the resident undergraduate students on the campus scarcely knew that anything was going on. As usual, few people in the area, beyond those directly involved in the graduate program, knew much about it either.

Nor could the director of the three programs have been more appropriately selected. Charles Welsh came to Rollins in 1957 armed with a Ph.D. from New York University, broad experience in college teaching and even broader experience in the business world as an advisor to business leaders as well as a full-time employee in private industry. Alert, articulate (and slightly balding), Welsh is keenly aware of the value of sound business education and its significance, in turn, to strong private industry.

William Edwards brought an Ohio State Ph.D. with him back to Florida, and served hitches at most levels of public school teaching and administration before joining the Rollins staff in 1961, and taking over as director of the MAT program.

John Ross, youngest of the three directors, holds a Ph.D. from the University of Wisconsin and has been a typically strong member of the science faculties since 1953. Succeeding Dr. Dan Thomas as director of the program in 1963, he seems to be the perfect academic counterpart to the breed of young scientists being attracted in increasing numbers to private industry.

The MBA program can boast the most diversified student body. Half the students are graduate engineers; the rest are liberal arts graduates with majors predominantly in business, economics and fine arts. The latter are men professionally employed in public relations and communications. Director Welsh estimates that half his students hold their undergraduate degrees from other private colleges, while most of the physics students are state engineering college graduates, and the vast majority of MAT students hold degrees from public colleges and universities. Half of the MAT students are women, but women represent a very small minority in the other two programs.

Dr. Edwards, on the other hand, has the most diversified course offerings in his MAT program. There, course offerings span ten areas or divisions found in typical school programs (English, History, etc.), with two more, physical education and reading to be added this fall. Whatever his area of specialty, chances are the local teacher or administrator can continue his formal education through the masters in Rollins' MAT program. Many are doing just that. Forty students signed up for the first graduate courses offered in 1961. The next fall enrollment exceeded 150. The typical student (more than two-thirds are active teachers) will spend two years earning his Master of Arts in Teaching. As early as 1964, less than three years after the program had begun, 68 degrees were conferred. In 1965 more than 100 students will earn the MAT degree, if you count graduations in June and in August, for the MAT program operates around the calendar as well as around the clock.

Practically the only sources of graduate work in physics are the giant universities, where work can be taken through the Ph.D. Thus, John Ross' masters' program in physics is a rarity, and may well be the largest of its kind in the country. Then, too, the working engineer will more than likely have to spend four years of part-time college work to earn his master's, instead of the usual two years common to MBA and MAT students. This further accounts for the fact that only from 6 to 12 men will qualify for the degree in a given year. Actually, two degrees are offered in the program, one in physics and one in physics engineering, but the requirements vary only slightly, including a thesis for the straight physics degree. Almost all the students are employees of Orlando's Martin Company, perhaps better known across the country for its products (Titan, Pershing, Bullpup) than for its name. Thus, these students of Rollins have played some roll in the nation's foremost space industry, adding a touch of glamour to the otherwise routine, albeit significant, business of graduate education.

Dr. Welsh's MBA program will eventually be tied in with the Crummer School of Finance and Business Administration, but the other two programs will have no such official counterpart.

Fees are kept low in all three programs; lower than most similar programs in private universities, but higher than any public college programs where the taxpayers pay the difference.

None of the programs are without problems; securing first-rate faculty, finding convenient and adequate classrooms in the area, even parking; but somehow they manage to solve them all. What the future will hold is not certain. But so long as there is an unmet demand for these graduate programs elsewhere in the community, they will probably continue to tick along, providing first-rate, if unheralded, graduate school opportunities for hundreds of men and women in Central Florida.

EDITOR'S NOTE:

ALUMNI REUNION

Plans Complete For April 23-25 Event

Improvement in all phases of the annual reunion program is the Keynote as the committee completed its plans for the gala event scheduled for April 23-25.

Chairman for this year's event is Mrs. Nancy (Rohlfing) Bradford '35. She is assisted by two co-chairmen, Mrs. Ann (Todd) Johns '57, Dr. Joseph Mulson '56, and a host of Central Florida Alumni who promise a never-to-be-forgotten experience for Alumni returning for the forthcoming festivities.

A re-shuffling of schedules and some minor changes in events have been incorporated to assure a pleasant homecoming for all Alumni from 1890 to 1965. Special reunion classes are those whose years end in 0 or 5, but the committee underscores the fact that the program will be equally appealing to all classes. "Every year is reunion year", and every Alumnus will find familiar faces and interesting events to make the return trip to the campus a delightful experience.

Friday, April 23, marks the opening of the gala week-end, and, in addition to registration and greetings, the day's events include a baseball game with arch-rival Stetson, an all-Alumni picnic, and the traditional class parties that night. Pioneers, who will be joined by Gay 90's members this year will have a joint class party in the reception room of the Alumni House and the respective group presidents, Mr. Caryl Twitchell '13, and Dr. Fred Ensminger '97, urge all Alumni of 1925 and earlier to join them that evening. Parties for other classes will be combined, and held at the Winter Park Racquet Club, an innovation of last year which met with warm approval.

Saturday's events are many and varied. Highlights of the day include the "President's Luncheon", immediately following the annual meeting, to be held in Rose Skillman Hall, more commonly referred to as the "Beanery". At the luncheon, President Hugh McKean will discuss aspects of Rollins' exciting future plans and report on recent events of great significance to the college's future.

The Reunion Committee includes Gertrude (Ward) Campbell, Nancy (Rohlfing) Bradford, Jeanne (Rogers) Tauscher, Ann (Todd) Johns, Frances (Daniel) Divine.

Excerpts from the Annie Russell Theatre's smash hit "My Fair Lady" will key the afternoon's events, and leave ample time for leisurely tours of the campus.

The highlight of the day, and the week-end, will be the annual reunion dinner, and this year the festive occasion will take place at the Seminole Hotel. The committee guarantees ample facilities for the anticipated increase in number of Alumni attending

Sunday, April 25, will see a continuation of a change, begun last year, to have an annual Alumni service in the Knowles Memorial Chapel. This year the preacher will be Alumnus Dan Matthews '55, of the Church of the Holy Communion (Episcopal) in Memphis, Tennessee. Following the service, the students will continue their participation in reunion activities with a reception sponsored by the student government. While the reception is the final all-Alumni event, the annual luncheon for the Pioneers, who will be joined by the distinguished members of the Gay 90's, closes the week-end.

Many hours of thoughtful planning are now complete, as the campus and local Alumni await the arrival of what will and should be a record attendance of Alumni.

FIELDHOUSE FUNDS EDGE UPWARD

At the annual Founders Week in February it was possible for Thomas P. Johnson, general chairman of the Enyart Alumni Fieldhouse drive to announce that gifts and pledges had passed the quarter million dollar mark.

The new gifts and pledges which brought the total up came primarily from the Central Florida area. There, Howard Showalter, Jr., chairman of the drive in the state of Florida was putting the finishing touches on his efforts to contact all Alumni in the state.

Scheduled to go out to all Florida Alumni in mid-March was a mail appeal which included the new four-color fieldhouse brochure with appropriate pledge cards. In this way every Alumnus in the state of Florida, including especially those who may not have been personally contacted by Showalter's army of volunteers, will be given an opportunity to participate in the vital effort.

Meantime, at the Founders Week activities, which included a trustees' meeting and the announcement of a sizeable gift for the Rollins Science Center by Mr. A. G. Bush, the site for the actual construction of the fieldhouse was determined.

Several potential sites had been proposed to the Alumni by the administration, and a location behind the Annie Russell Theatre and the Knowles Memorial Chapel had been tentatively selected. Then, during the winter, various government officials confirmed their plans to widen and alter the route of Fairbanks Avenue (also a state highway) which borders the campus on the north. Their decision in effect, calls for the street to swing away from the campus northward. While the college would lose some property in the transition, the rerouted street will have the effect of increasing the size of the Sandspur bowl, thus allowing room on the west side of this playground area for the fieldhouse.

The fieldhouse then will be constructed on the west side of the existing Sandspur bowl, at the intersection of Park and Fairbanks Avenues. The location there is made possible as a result of the decision to re-route Fairbanks, and thus makes the site considerably more practical than the alternate sites heretofore available.

Meantime General Chairman Tom Johnson has added Alumni to his leadership staff in key areas outside Florida as the effort moves forward.

Alumni are reminded that gifts of all sizes have been received, and have been a vital part of the quarter of a million dollars pledged and given thus far. In addition, special proposals and memorials are also available in the structure.

Alumni Club Adds Gift

The Rollins basketball squad could again boast of an "improved" record as their 1964-65 season closed recently. Their record showed 6 wins against 16 losses.

This is the third consecutive season in which the team's won-lost record was better than the previous seasons. But it would be less than candid not to admit that this record improvement is still somewhat less than an insurmountable task, considering the fact that the "winning streak" began only four years ago after a disastrous season of no victories.

On the other hand, there is much to be pleased about. In the first place, it is, after all, an improvement, and this alone is a plus factor when it comes to morale, both among players and the student body. Furthermore, Rollins has one of the youngest coaches around in Alumnus BOYD COFFIE, and, as would be expected, he leans to the young, scrappy type of players, who proved more than once that they did not figure the ball game was over until the final buzzer sounded.

Much of the time coach COFFIE had freshmen and sophomores on the floor, and to his credit and theirs, they showed considerable improvement during the season. With graduation inflicting no serious wounds on the squad, and with a year of college experience behind his freshmen, coach COFFIE could readily come up with a flat prediction for next year: further improvement.

Sophomore Millard Nixon moves in for a shot against Tampa while teammate Phil Kirk comes up to assist.

Baseball

It is doubtful that anyone around can remember when the Rollins baseball team last suffered a losing season. And this despite the fact that Rollins has never shied away from competition with schools ten or twenty times her size in full-time enrollment.

The 1965 schedule includes some big school opponents, as usual, but judging from pre-season indications, athletic director and coach JOE JUSTICE will end the season in late May with more than a winning season.

Crew

Rollins crew, under coach U. T. Bradley, always has its work cut out in advance. One reason is simply that competition in Florida and the south is not as strong as elsewhere, most particularly in the east. Consequently, "Brad's" crew has been nosed out in pre-season races in January and early February by Wisconsin and MIT. The balance of the season, which runs from January into May, will see the crew facing more competition from Florida schools. The state championship races should see the crew bringing back the trophy on reunion weekend once again, and they will take a healthy crack at the Dad Vail Regatta in Philadelphia on May 7 and 8 to close the season.

Tennis

Coach NORM COPELAND continues to go quietly and capably about his business of producing good tennis squads. Here again, Rollins faces giants from the north, including, this year, Penn, Columbia, Kentucky and Indiana. But there is no shortage of first-rate tennis competition in Florida, and the season always turns out to be a rugged, grueling one from the first of March into the summer heat of May. With state-wide competition which includes Miami, Florida, Florida State and Stetson added to an already formidable schedule, it would be easy to rationalize a losing season. Don't bet on it.

FACULTY-CAMPUS NEWS

Frank Sedwick, Ph.D, professor of Spanish, director of Foreign Language Studies and director of Overseas Programs, recently had published his second book in the last year — "A History of the Useless-Precaution Plot in Spanish and French Literature", by the University of North Carolina Press. His first book, "The Tragedy of Manuel Azana and The Fate of The Spanish Republic", was published by the Ohio State University Press.

Rhea Marsh Smith, Ph.D, professor of History, has recently had a book published entitled, "Spain: A Modern History", and an article on Spain published in the December 1964 issue of Current History — "Spain Emerges from Isolation". "Spain: A Modern History" (600 pages) is available to Alumni for $8.75 from the University of Michigan Press. Dr. Smith is also author of "The Day of the Liberals in Spain" and has written articles on Spain for the Americana Annual for the past four years.

Kenneth Griswold, Ed.D, associate professor of Education and coordinator of Student Teaching, has been selected as the official delegate of the State of Florida to attend the National Conference of the Association of Student Teaching in Chicago.

Bruce Wavell, Ph.D, associate professor of Philosophy, and Dr. Paul Vestal, represented Rollins at the National Science Foundation meetings in Washington held during January.

William Fletcher, Ph.D, assistant professor of Latin-American Studies, discussed "Puerto Rico: Freedom and Power in the Caribbean" at a Cafezinho Book Review in January.

Paul Douglass, Ph.D, director of the Center for Practical Politics, is Moderator on the Pro and Con telecast on a local station, WFTV, which started its 1965 season in January. The program features a panel of Rollins students and a panel of leading area citizens discussing major controversial issues and is in its sixth annual season.

A. J. Hanna, L.H.D, Rollins First Vice-President, was cited at a recent meeting of the College's Centennial Commission, for his leadership in directing the Diamond Jubilee Committee responsible for raising more than $1 million of the $8 million received during the McKean administration, and for his work with the Commission. The new director of the Commission is Dr. Leo C. Muller, Rollins Vice-President of Institutional Planning.

Joe Mulson, Ph.D, assistant professor of Physics, has been named operations director of the 1965 Florida State Science Talent Search.

Paul Vestal, Ph.D, professor of biology and director of the Beal-Maltbie Shell Museum, spoke at the Southeast Regional Conference of the National Science Association meeting last November in Hollywood, Fla.

Joe Justice, associate professor of Physical Education and Athletic director, represented Rollins at the annual meeting of the National Collegiate Athletic Association in Chicago in January.

Miss Edith Knepper has joined the staff as Head Reference Librarian of the Mills Memorial Library. Miss Knepper was formerly employed at Kentucky Wesleyan College and obtained her B.A. from Murray State College. In 1960 she received the M.S. degree in Library Science from the University of Kentucky.

For the fifth consecutive year Rollins has received a grant from the National Science Foundation for support of a "Secondary Science Training Program". President McKean announced in January that this year's grant, $7,870, will allow Rollins to conduct its popular Math Summer School.

President McKean recently announced the receipt of an anonymous $25,000 gift to the College to endow scholarships.

A grant of $5,000 was recently made by the Rivco Foundation, upon recommendation by Howard O. Wallace of Vero Beach, (Wallace's son, WARREN, graduated in 1960 from Rollins). $2,000 of this grant is for faculty salaries, $1,500 for business administration equipment, and $1,500 for books for business administration.

The Art Department recently received a gift of $3,000 from the estate of UARDEN (ROBINSON) AUSTIN (Mrs. Harry S. — deceased May 13, 1963). Mrs. Austin was Rollins class of 1923. She came to Rollins from Jackson Center, Ohio, and later moved to Kansas City, Missouri, where she became active in business.

The four member colleges of the Associated Florida Private Colleges Fund, which includes Rollins, will share a $3,000 grant from the Cities Service Foundation; Armstrong Cork Company of Lancaster, Pa., has presented the AFPC with a gift of $450, and also donating to the Fund is the Fremont Foundation, a charitable corporation organized by the California Packing Corporation, which gave $250.

The Mary Melrose Williams Science Foundation has presented Rollins with a $3,000 gift to sponsor this year's Summer Institute for Elementary School Teachers; this program is designed to stimulate and encourage improved teaching of science in the public elementary schools of America. This summer's Institute will again be directed by Dr. Paul Vestal.

Rollins received $1,000 gifts from the Commercial Bank and First National Bank at Winter Park in December. The grants were in support of the educational endeavors undertaken by Rollins in the Central Florida area.

The Mills Memorial Library has received the private personal library of the late Dr. Donald W. Carroll who spent the past 12 years at Rollins where he was professor of Chemistry. Dr. Carroll died in September 1964.

A record number of undergraduate residence college credit courses is being offered during Semester 2-A of the School of General Studies. Program director George Saute announced another new course in the curriculum — Psychology of Adjustment, being taught by George Roberts. 30 classes are being offered twice a week for eight weeks, while 14 courses will be offered once a week for 14 weeks by the School.

Rollins hosted a meeting of Admissions representatives from the five college member Associated Mid-Florida Colleges, in Winter Park on December 7. Dean of Admissions Spencer Lane reported that the feature speaker was Miss Caroline S. Hodges, coordinator, College Assistance Project, National Scholarship Service and Fund for Negro Students. The member colleges involved were Florida Presbyterian, Florida Southern, Stetson, Bethune-Cookman and Rollins.

An unique Tiffany Colloquim featuring Dr. Robert Koch, author of "Louis C. Tiffany, Rebel in Glass", was held on December 12. Dr. Koch, an art professor at Southern Connecticut State College, presented the College with the manuscript of his book. President and Mrs. Hugh F. McKean, early patrons of Tiffany art, hold a valuable Tiffany collection, including paintings, water colours, furniture, vases and glassware. Their Tiffany stained glass windows, many of which were originally exhibited in Paris and London, perhaps comprise the largest such collection.

Central Florida area physics teachers were hosted at Rollins in December at the annual Fall Physical Science Study Committee meeting. Dr. John S. Ross, professor of Physics, directed the meeting, and Dr. Willard J. Pearce, associate professor of Physics lectured on "Plasma Jet Sources".

The third Annual Institute on the U.S. and the non-Western World was held on campus during February. The program featured panel discussions and lectures by experts on the Middle East. This Institute is one of several being held on the campuses of the Associated Mid-Florida Colleges with the support of the Danforth Foundation.

His Excellency Juracy Magalhaes, Ambassador of Brazil, was among contributors to the College's 38th Animated Magazine held during Founders' Week in February.

Mieczyslaw Horszowski, renowned pianist, made his annual appearance on the Rollins Concert Series in January at the Annie Russell Theatre. Also appearing on the Series in January was The Netherlands Chamber Choir.

The College served as host to six Tibetan students during the Christmas holidays. The far-visiting students were among the thousands of Tibetans driven from their country to India by the Red Chinese in 1959. Mr. Norman J. Meiklejohn of Winter Park, a former member of the U.S. Foreign Service, arranged for the visit to Rollins, and is one of six men sponsoring the Tibetans during their year's stay in the U.S.

More than 100 secondary school educators and counselors converged on the campus during January for the sixth annual Rollins College Guidance Conference. They represented both private and public schools, chiefly those from which Rollins students graduated.

"The Dairy of Anne Frank" was the opening production of the Annie Russell Theatre for the 1965 season. "The Matchmaker" will be presented March 9-13, and "Antigone" will be the final play April 5-10. The Fred Stone Theatre, a new theatre on the campus, established to present avant-garde productions, the unusual and the original, opened its season in November with "The Birthday Party". This experimental theatre will present "Oh Dad, Poor Dad, Mamma's Hung You in the Closet and I'm Feeling So Sad", April 5-10.

The Hon. Milton P. Barall of the Department of State was a speaker at the Latin-American Forum on February 4. The topic was "The Alliance for Progress". The Hon. Barall serves as Deputy Representative on the Inter-American Committee which supervises the development of the Alliance for Progress program.

Rollins students Sue Raynor, Viki Braun, Bob Wiley, Lee Mingledorf and Bob Doerr will represent Austria at the "College Model General Assembly" run by the Collegiate Council for the United Nations, being held in March at the U.N. The students are all members of the Rollins Speakers Bureau of which Dr. Patricia Drabik is Advisor. Dr. Drabik will accompany the students on the trip. This year's Council is sponsored by Harvard University who invited Rollins to participate.

Jules Pagano, Deputy Director for Special Projects of the Peace Corps, member of the Adult Education Advisory Committee of the Univ. of Chicago and of the executive board of the National Institute of Labor Education, visited Rollins in January and spoke for the first Latin-American Forum of 1965.
